Millennium Corporate Credit Union Partners with Pidgin to Bring Unified Instant Payments to Nearly 300 Credit Unions

Hundreds of Midwest credit unions gain access to FedNow, RTP, and stablecoin rails through a single, streamlined platform

Wichita, KS - September 16, 2026

Millennium Corporate Credit Union has partnered with Pidgin - a secure, unified instant payments platform built for the future of payments - bringing nearly 300 credit unions across the Midwest and beyond access to FedNow, RTP, and stablecoin capabilities as part of a single, scalable payments strategy.

This partnership adds to Pidgin's growing footprint. More than 1,000 community financial institutions now have access to Pidgin's instant payments solutions across the company's clients, including corporate credit unions and bankers' banks. That reach, combined with more than 100 financial institutions using the platform directly, represents the largest market share of U.S. financial institutions and establishes Pidgin as the industry's market leader in instant payments.

Pidgin delivers specialized solutions for the evolving financial institution, helping credit unions deliver smarter, faster and safer payments to their members. The platform serves as a central connection point to the Federal Reserve's FedNow Service, The Clearing House's RTP network and other faster payment options, so credit unions can offer instant payments across a wide range of use cases. Pidgin connects a credit union's core processing system, digital banking and other third-party apps, and multiple payment networks, all while keeping money within the financial institution rather than a holding account owned by a fintech provider.

"Instant payments are quickly becoming essential to how members expect to move their money," said Haley DaVee, CEO of Millennium Corporate Credit Union. "Partnering with Pidgin gives the hundreds of credit unions we serve a clear path to fast, secure, instant payments, without the complexity or cost that often gets in the way. That is exactly how we strengthen credit unions and the members they serve."

The partnership comes as instant payments continue to gain momentum. Nearly 1,700 financial institutions now participate in the FedNow Service, and more than 1,100 are connected to the RTP network, reflecting broad adoption of real-time payment capabilities. Digital asset rails have moved alongside those established systems, with stablecoins processing more than $9 trillion in value in 2025.

"Millennium Corporate Credit Union has spent decades earning the trust of credit unions, and that trust opens the door for hundreds of institutions to embrace real-time payments with confidence," said Tim Rozanski, SVP of Sales and Co-Founder, Pidgin. "The demand for instant payments is accelerating, and credit unions want a partner that makes it simple to deliver. Our partnership with Millennium puts that capability within reach for even more credit unions, and we look forward to helping them transform their payment operations."

Industry research projects the global real-time payments market will reach $284.49 billion by 2032, fueled in large part by the FedNow Service and rising demand for instant settlement. As that market expands, the across every rail. Through Millennium, hundreds of credit unions can now do exactly that.
